

Organizing Children & Students

---

BOOKS FOR CHILDREN/STUDENTS

A Kid's Guide to Organizing, written by children for children, states: "Now-a-days adult organizing books are not practical enough for kids. Kids cannot understand them yet. Kids, just like adults, need to be organized." The book addresses organizing space and time for children ages six through twelve years.

Co-written by teenager Jessi Morgenstern-Colon and her mother Julie Morgenstern, Organizing from the Inside Out for Teens is written for teenagers and their specific needs. This book will enable your student to be more successful in school

BOOKS FOR PARENTS

Every Child Has a Thinking Style uses quizzes with which parents can assess their child's thinking style, sensory preference, and extroversion-introversion dynamic. Concrete methods for helping children organize their room, time, schoolwork, and play are discussed.

If the practical strategies delineated in The Organized Student by Donna Goldberg with Jennifer Zwiebel are implemented, middle and high school students will achieve both in and out of the classroom.

In 500 Ways to Organize Your Child Cheryl R. Carter shares five vital elements for teaching children skills related to organizing tasks. She shares 500 organizing and time management tips in addition to providing answers to frequently asked questions.

Sheila McCurdy writes The Floor is Not an Option! for families who want to organize any area within their home. This practical, down-to-earth, easy-to-read guide spurs the reader into action.

INTERNET RESOURCES

- GreatSchools: Public & Private School Ratings, Reviews & Parent Community from pre-school through college. Information on learning disabilities, homework help, parenting dilemmas, test prep & more.
- ListPlanIt: Hundreds of lists in many categories to help create a more organized life.
- Schoolfolio: Storage solution for children's art.

Information courtesy of Minding Your Matters® While not an endorsement of specific products, we hope you find it useful. Contact us to learn about our Flexible Structure Method™ of organizing and productivity that can be mastered by anyone.

www.MindingYourMatters.com